

Meet Neil Ty

I met legacy, & his name is Neil.

Neil's son, Noah, and my son Scott are new classmates. They've been hanging out more and more at each other's houses & enjoying life.

Recently I was picking up Scott from soccer after a day of work. Neil walked up to me and introduced himself. We exchanged pleasantries and he asked if I was Scott's dad. They moved to PH a few years ago from the USA, but Neil actually grew up here in Manila.

Then began an amazing story. He first asked if I was related to Mrs. Lyons, Donna Lyons. I proudly said “Yes, she’s my grandmother.” He then proceeded to tell me that in 4th grade when he was 10 years old, he was in a chapel service and his life was never the same.

As Neil told me, “It was Mrs. (Donna) Lyons who led a school chapel. I still remember.” To put things in context, Neil’s parents were Buddhist, Catholic, and a 3rd religion that I can’t remember. Needless to say, not necessarily a unified home as it came to religion.

There was Neil at 10 years old, as my Grandmother doing as she did best, finding a way to share Jesus. Neil then accepted Christ as his Savior in a chapel service.

Fast forward 30+ years, Neil now, with his wife and kids are missionaries here in Manila. Translating Bible study materials into Filipino.

One chapel, over 40 years ago, changed the direction of Neil, his life direction. Now Neil & his wife are raising their kids in a Godly home. Serving God's Purpose. God wins.

Never, Ever, Doubt that God will, can, and is using you.

Who knows, maybe in 30 or 40 years, your grandson will meet your Spiritual Grandchildren, as I did when I met Neil.

What's your Legacy? How are you investing your time, money, and talent?

Luke, Kelly, Scott,
Everett, & Virginia Lyons